

Building Relationships with Those Who Have Gone Before Us

Have you ever wished you could find peace with someone who has died? Longed for reconciliation that seems forever out of reach? The communion of saints offers profound hope—we remain connected to our loved ones, even across death.

Join us for an afternoon exploring the spiritual implications of our enduring bonds with the deceased. Through reflection, prayer and guided discussion, we'll examine:

- How the communion of saints unites us across earth, heaven and purgatory
- The possibility of ongoing healing and reconciliation with those who have died
- Spiritual practices for nurturing these sacred relationships
- Finding peace when words were left unspoken

This workshop offers a contemplative space to explore questions many carry silently: Can we still communicate with those we've lost? Is it too late to make peace? How does God's love continue to bind us together?

Whether you're seeking reconciliation or hoping to deepen your connection with a loved one, you'll find a welcoming community ready to journey with you.
